More Victories are won
by siege than by assault.

Apply this to business and see what it means: it means that continuous and steady advertising is more resultful than campaigns that come and go with long intervals in between.

For an advertiser with goods to sell to suspend his selling effort now is to make conditions worse for himself, and is no sign of that courage which is supposed to possess every Canadian heart in these war times.

Farmers Relieved by Aid of Dominion Government.

Agents Appointed at Bow Island,
Winnifred, Faith, Foremost and Grassy Lake.

That the Dominion Government is now fully aware of the conditions existing in this district and the necessity for granting relief to those requiring it, was made manifest on Saturday last when H. H. Brown of Medicine Hat arrived in Bow Island and made the necessary arrangements for relief measures.

A large number of farmers had assembled in the Review office soon after one o'clock to speak to Mr. Brown and to learn from him the extent of the relief which was to be granted them. The announcement that oats would be furnished for the horses in order that fall ploughing might be proceeded with caused general rejoicing, the majority of those present being especially concerned with reference to this matter.

The farmers were assured that every assistance would be rendered and relief granted to everyone that really needed it.

The local agent is instructed to issue orders for groceries, coal, feed for the horses, and sufficient feed for hogs to put them in a marketable shape.

Oats are being furnished on the basis of ten bushels for each horse, this being sufficient, it is thought, to finish the fall ploughing.

From the numerous applications already made, it is quite evident that the absence of horse feed is being felt more severely than the scarcity of provisions.

Up to Thursday about 120 applications had been made, a large proportion of which were for feed for stock. Numbers of applicants, it may be stated, were far from being destitute, but having spent their available cash on the year's work, had no funds to buy feed with, without sacrificing their stock, and this of course will now be unnecessary in view of the assistance rendered by the Federal authorities.

In connection with this assistance it may be as well to state that the applicant has the privilege of securing his goods wherever he chooses, and coal from the nearest source of supply.

Applications should be made in person to the agent, W. P. Cotton, at the Review office, Bow Island, who will be glad to give information and render every assistance possible. Agents have also been appointed at Winnifred, Faith, Foremost, and Grassy Lake.

Applicants would do well to remember that the measures taken by the Dominion Government are primarily for those who are not in a position to purchase anything. Any abuse of this system will in all probability result in a withdrawal of the relief.

Fire Destroys Six Stores on Main Street.

With no Adequate Fire-fighting Apparatus Buildings Doomed
from the Start.

Bow Island will certainly have reason to remember the year 1914, for almost from the beginning it has seen nothing but a series of fires. The epidemic started with the destructive fire on Sunday, February 22nd, which destroyed nine buildings, and converted Main Street from a thriving and prosperous thoroughfare into a village nightmare. Shortly afterwards the Bow Island Hotel met the same fate. Now, we have this additional loss, the particulars and incidents in connection with which are almost identical with those of the February conflagration.

On Tuesday, the fire started by some means unknown in Mather's bakery, about four a.m., the outbreak apparently being first discovered by Mrs. Peterson, who promptly notified Chief Lakenby. The fire bell pealing out immediately afterwards brought out a large number of the citizens who arrived to see the bakery enveloped in flames. From a very short time Hygge's tailor shop, Queen restaurant, Beattie's real estate office, and Willmot's hardware store were all included in the general blaze. What could be done to save anything was willingly undertaken by the citizens. A few things were saved from the drug store and the restaurant. From the hardware store most of the stock was saved, there being, however, a large amount of material in the basement which it was entirely impossible to get out.

The citizens (men, women and children) worked energetically and wherever assistance was necessary willing helpers were always at hand. It was mainly owing to this fact that the outbuildings did not share in the general destruction.

Fortunately, the wind was very light, a circumstance which in all probability saved the north side of the town, where at one time during the hottest period of the fire buildings were smoking furiously from the heat.

The total loss incurred in the fire is estimated at $20,000, of which about half is covered by insurance.

Latest Parisian

Importations

In spite of the European war we have the advance military styles direct from Paris, and here are some of the very newest of them. Although American designers are active and smart that they can give American women just as good styles as the Paris house, or better, still there are a few women who will insist upon Paris mode. These women must not feel aggrieved if they are furnished with Paris fashions that never were worn in Paris.

There will be many attempts made to cater to woman's innate love for foreign importations, and many little Parisian labels will be sewed into the creases of hats made in New York. If the women do not know the difference the American designer will have proved his point to his own satisfaction at any rate.

However, here are some bona fide Parisian hats, imported before the unfortunate royal assassination which precipitated what may prove to be the most horrible war of history. For chic and style these hats have not been surpassed in many seasons.

Three things have been decided about the autumn hat—it will be small, smart and pretty balanced upon the head. Large hats may make their appearance later, but there is no indication of them

In the early mode unless the Georgette sailor at the upper left hand corner of the illustration is a slight indication.

Each season Georgette brings out a new sailor model which immediately becomes the fashion. This year the Georgette sailor is soft of crown and curved of brim and has a white coupe pumpkin pood front and rear.

The day of the blocked felt hat is passed—that is, it is passed so far as the fashionably gowned woman is concerned. Unfortunately the shops will show blocked felt hats, but they will be bought by women for general utility purposes. The fashionable hat will be of velvet combined with soft felt, velvet combined with tulle, velvet trimmed with flowers and feathers.

The next model in the illustration is built of the fashionable velvet over a buckram frame wired into shape. Burst ostrich feathers furnish the unique trimming, combined with a band of moire ribbon with a little flat bow in front. The amateur milliner at the bottom right hand side is trimmed with coque feathers laid flat upon the crown, while the upstanding burnt ostrich feather gives to the tiny model much dignity.

The jaunty little hat illustrated next is the rare of the foot is a large one, but it is only within the scope of this article to speak of the ritual cars of the toe nail. A theme not unworthy of study.

The nail of the great toe should be broad, flat and smooth, even as the nail of the thumb. It should not be too flat upon the flesh, nor should it be too curved, for this latter condition tends to become exaggerated, so that the ends of the corn press deeper and deeper into the flesh.

A slight "half moon" should be visible, and it should be worn long enough to show a slight rim of white above the pink, and the outline at the base should not be dry and harsh, but soft, free of hangnails and rounding in an unbroken curve from one end to the other.

Barely none of these are at all difficult to accomplish. A little care once a week with a pair of curved nail scissors, a pair of cuticle scissors, a file, an emery board, an orange wood stick, with a little bit of cotton to be used under the nail edge, and the work is easily done.

See that the shoes are amply long if you wish to avoid bunions, which can make one as wretched as the toothache and bring more wrinkles to the face in a day than your massage can work out in a week.

A tiny bit of pumice will sometimes be found useful in grinding down hardened, calloused cuticle. Care should be taken not to roughen or injure the cuticle under the nail, but all dust should be removed by a little damp cotton wound about the orange wood stick.

The toe nails should be cut a little square rather than round, the nail of the big toe cut rather shorter in the middle than at the sides. A little of the nail should be left, and a little polishing powder, and presto, the nails which appeared dull and unsightly look perfectly pink and shining and will repay their owner for the time spent on them.

Such nails will not wear holes in silk stockings as rough, uncutted for nails often do.

INITIAL YOUR HANDKERCHIEFS. Do you mark your own handkerchiefs? If you have the time it is a wise and dainty thing to do, but why not vary the monotony of white initials? Indeed, if you wish to be really smart you will do so. For the handkerchiefs will be the most noticeable, at least in the mornings and afternoons, are embroidered or knitted in color. Usually the initial matches a color in the frock or the hat or sums a color accessory if the principal part of the costume is white. It is well to have several handkerchiefs in shades of green, if being a neutral color, so that they will be in harmony with the dress for which you have no matching color. Frequently white handkerchiefs have border bands in color and an initial or monogram of the same color. It is a small detail, but it is a detail which makes a difference.

On this map is an initial an inch and a half high and most elegant.

UNUSUAL NOTE PAPER. FOR the woman who seeks the unusual in note paper there is the double sheet with an inch wide flat turning back from the second sheet over the first from top to bottom.

To the right in a white coque feather turban. Such turbans, built entirely of feathers, both in black and white, are a seasonable novelty, which has "caught on" immensely. The brim in these hats is negligible, but the trimming wears something to the height of a foot or more. It is worn tilted over upon the right ear in a most engaging fashion.

The trimming upon the next hat in the illustration is not unlike the exquisites mentioned, but here the hair is the wood, that gours feathers compose the new alights and are here used poised upon the crown of a steeple hat built of velvet and satin. The lines of this hat are draped to its base, and are softened by the feathery alight. This hat shows the new soft shirred crown of black velvet. The brim has a facet of cream velvet, which is wonderfully becoming to the face. The arrangement of feathers posed coquettishly upon the front of the hat. The veil which goes with the hat is called a "baby veil" and is very effective.

A decorator noted for his artistic taste insists that many of the white enameled rooms which he plans shall have covers of cream or deep cream. Deep cream is preferable. The contrast of this rich tone against the white of the room is most effective. Even if the furniture and woodwork be in cream the cream or cream of the lace blends in with it beautifully and yet does not have the characteristics effect of dead white or cream with white covers.

For this purpose nothing is better than the imitation silk squares of lace. These come by the yard, already joined. They will not be wide enough, however, to make the cover, so that two strips will have to be joined. The joining is made ornamental by a piece of ivory or tortoise shell of the same shade as the flat lace. It will take two or three of these flat strips joined, according to the size of the square. When the strips have been so joined with the lace and an oblong has been formed edge the covers about the edge to match the insertion. To make the bedroom set complete there should be a bedspread and pillowcases, or, if one of these hollow roll bolsters is used, a bolster throw for it. Under these lace covers in every instance should be white or cream color found in winter! Shown!

For a GUESSING CONTEST. THERE are many flower cuttings, but here is one that may be new to you. It was new to the guests at a party where decorations consisted of garden flowers, where marigolds, dahlias and flower daisies were served, and where the prizes for the various winners in the guessing contests were lovely bunches of flowers from the hostess garden.

The answers to the questions are all flowers. Here are the questions: What is the middle flower? The color of her hair? Starlight.

What is her sister's name and the color of her dress? Black Eyed Susan.

What is her lover's name, and what does he write with? Jonquil.

What is her father's name and office in the Presbyterian church? Elderberry.

All About the Navajo Blanket

THE Navajos belong to the Algonquian family, which originally came from Alaska and has always produced Indian weavers. Originally these weavers were restricted in the choice of their material to bark and the woolly tress of trees and plants, but the Spaniards who invaded the southwest following the conquistadors brought sheep with them and made it possible for the Indians to use a splendid substitute for their native cotton and the woolly substance of the various forms of cat.

About the only modern implements that are employed in weaving are the hand cards with tooth combs for the wool and shears with which to make cuttings. The frames are made of rude poles, with the beams to support the wide raddle rods.

The Indian puts his frames on uprights, usually staked and lashed to trees in front of his huts.

The women do the weaving situated upon the ground, with legs fixed under them. They are able to reach to either side or halfway up. When the work has progressed to a height where it is uncomfortable for them to reach they tilt the loom so that they may continue in their original position. The spindle in use is that of a hundred years ago, a stick thrust through the center of a wooden disk. The work is exceedingly slow, an inch or two being a day's work on the better grades.

Most of the "genuine Navajo" blankets that find their way to market are graded as half fancy. They are made from high grade wool, but the dye used is aniline and not the vegetable kind which marks the genuine blankets. These aniline dyed blankets preserve most of the old patterns and subplots of color, but the weaves are not as durable. The best blankets are made of fine native wool spun to a tendon that makes them almost as durable as steel, with dyes that last always. The coarser grades of blankets have but few flecks of color, being usually white, gray or brown.

The Navajos have long had a high reputation as expert dyers. In the old days they had a native blue, but nowadays indigo is often substituted. Their blacks are made from roasted corn mixed with gum from the small pine and later joined to an infusion of sumac leaves and twigs. A red dye is formed from the bark roots of sumac, mixed with black alder bark and juniper ashes. The yellow dye is made from the boiled roots of a flowering weed reduced with native alum.

The bright red of their blankets is often produced by interweaving of tegals or hairy cotton and wool. This has been made for years especially for the Spanish trade. The color is a long nap. Two blankets have regular woven borders, these being looked upon as marvellous. In addition the Indians dislike having to weave the ends before they are reached.

An imagery that is remarkable is displayed by the Navajos in their designs. This imagery is largely confined to the color scheme, as nearly everything done is a copy of something that the weavers have seen. The moon, stars and other celestial objects they most often reproduce. When President Roosevelt was at Albuquerque years ago a sign was given a copy of the message of congratulation. The Commercial club desired to extend to him, and this she was in well formed English letters a sign in a Navajo blanket that was presented to him.

The signs characteristic of these Indian blankets are not intended to represent lightning. They are simply the weaver's idea of beauty. The lozenge designs are the high spots in Navajo art, and into the making of these some broad and sometimes alarming combinations and schemes of color are thrown.

The more imaginative of them weave into their color effects rude representations of bows and arrows and household implements, stalks of corn and the like. On some of their blankets they reproduce trains, locomotives and similar objects. Formerly it was a common practice for the weavers first to draw their designs in sand, but they depend nowadays upon inspiration. The Navajo artist uses no curves. In the ancient days every cross, square or square was the embodiment of some prayer to the evil gods. The Navajo idea being that the good gods need not be supplicated. Being good, they will assist in their duty.

In Navajo symbolic dialect each color has a significance, white signifying the east, blue the south, yellow the west and black the north.

NEW centerpieces of embroidered linen come in odd shapes as a variation on the old circular style. This hand embroidered centerpiece is in the turquoise shade, the pattern being accentuated by the placing of the flowers.

MAKE SNAPSHOTS OF YOURSELF

DID you ever seriously think that you would give a good deal of the skill to see yourself as others see you? It is almost impossible to criticize yourself as you are, simply because you have a very one-sided opinion of yourself, so when you are studying the art of dress, you are studying your own hair, holding yourself upright, improving your figure and all the other personal things that the woman who makes a good appearance usually studies you are working at a disadvantage. It is impossible for you to get a good, all round view of yourself. You may stand by the hour in front of your mirror—if you have time—and yet you will see only certain sides of your many sided self.

Snapshots, if you are fortunate enough to have many of them, of your self form the best means of studying your defects and correcting them.

You who thought you held your figure so erect, with but dear regard for

For the White Bedroom

IN a cream or a white bedroom most women have the idea that nothing but white pink or blue covers will do for the dresser, chiffonier and bed. This is a mistake. To have the bedroom covers in white when the room itself is enameled in white is to make the room characterless, whereas to put a color into it at once gives it a personality.

A decorator noted for his artistic taste insists that many of the white enameled rooms which he plans shall have covers of cream or deep cream. Deep cream is preferable. The contrast of this rich tone against the white of the room is most effective. The brim has a facet of cream velvet, which is wonderfully becoming to the face. The arrangement of feathers posed coquettishly upon the front of the hat. The veil which goes with the hat is called a "baby veil" and is very effective.

A decorator noted for his artistic taste insists that many of the white enameled rooms which he plans shall have covers of cream or deep cream. Deep cream is preferable. The contrast of this rich tone against the white of the room is most effective. Even if the furniture and woodwork be in cream the cream or cream of the lace blends in with it beautifully and yet does not have the characteristics effect of dead white or cream with white covers.

For this purpose nothing is better than the imitation silk squares of lace. These come by the yard, already joined. They will not be wide enough, however, to make the cover, so that two strips will have to be joined. The joining is made ornamental by a piece of ivory or tortoise shell of the same shade as the flat lace. It will take two or three of these flat strips joined, according to the size of the square. When the strips have been so joined with the lace and an oblong has been formed edge the covers about the edge to match the insertion. To make the bedroom set complete there should be a bedspread and pillowcases, or, if one of these hollow roll bolsters is used, a bolster throw for it. Under these lace covers in every instance should be white or cream color found in winter! Shown!

For a GUESSING CONTEST. THERE are many flower cuttings, but here is one that may be new to you. It was new to the guests at a party where decorations consisted of garden flowers, where marigolds, dahlias and flower daisies were served, and where the prizes for the various winners in the guessing contests were lovely bunches of flowers from the hostess garden.

The answers to the questions are all flowers. Here are the questions: What is the middle flower? The color of her hair? Starlight.

What is her favorite brother? Sweet William.

What does her brother like to do in winter? Snowball.

At what hour does her brother wake her father? Four o'clock.

What is her sister's name and the color of her dress? Black Eyed Susan.

What is her lover's name, and what does he write with? Jonquil.

What is her father's name and office in the Presbyterian church? Elderberry.
